Brief your AI like a new staff member.

Most bad AI answers come from bad briefs. Here's the four-part brief we use at Eaglescroft every day.

PART ONE

Role.

Give it a job title.

EXAMPLE

“You are an operations assistant for a home-care business in Abuja.”

PART TWO

Context.

Give it what a new hire would need to know.

EXAMPLE

“Our customers mostly message on WhatsApp, after work hours, and want a quick price and a visit date.”

PART THREE

Task.

One clear job, with a finish line.

EXAMPLE

“Write five reply templates for first-time enquiries. Each must end by offering two visit times.”

PART FOUR

Format.

Show it what good looks like.

EXAMPLE

“Under 60 words each. Warm, plain English. No emoji. Return them as a numbered list.”

BEFORE AND AFTER

Same tool. Different brief.

WEAK BRIEF

"Write replies for my customers."

STRONG BRIEF

Role + Context + Task + Format, in four sentences. You get replies you can send today, not a draft you have to rewrite.

YOUR TURN

Save this. Use it on your next prompt.

Follow Eaglescroft for practical AI every week: real tools, real workflows, no hype.
